Story by Graham Hadley ABOUT THE DEVELOPMENT OF THIS OUTSTANDING OUTDOOR PARK: The park covers 38 acres of property that used to be a sod farm. It is accessed by a road built with the help of state funding during Gov. Bob Riley's administration to allow residents in that part of Lincoln to get around trains stopped on tracks that bisect that section of the city, said Mayor Lew Watson. "Lincoln has long needed a place for the public to launch boats. Like so many of the public works success stories in the region, Lincoln's Landing is a cooperative effort, Mayor Watson said. "The McCaig family donated some land, the railroad worked with us, as did Alabama Power. ... And we cornered the market on management of the park," pointing to Les Robinson. Watson said the city was very lucky to get Robinson to head up Lincoln's Landing. He has served in the military and as the maintenance supervisor for Ashland in Clay County. "That will mean big things for Lincoln and surrounding communities, more business for our city" he said.
